

By Jeremy Allen
Thursday, April 4, 2013

Grand Blanc CEO delivers opening remarks at world's largest student investment conference in Dayton, Ohio

David Kudla

GRAND BLANC, MI – David Kudla, the CEO and chief investment strategist of Mainstay Capital Management in Grand Blanc, will deliver the opening remarks for the largest student investment conference in the world on Thursday, April 4.

Hosted annually at the University of Dayton in association with the United Nations Global Compact, RISE – Redefining Investment Strategy Education – brings together students and faculty from nearly 200 universities and other academic institutions for presentations and panel discussions.

In addition to his roles as CEO and chief investment strategist at Mainstay, Kudla also serves as the executive director of RISE.

“The University of Dayton is honored that two Federal Reserve bank presidents will share their perspectives with students from across the U.S. and other countries who are attending RISE,” Kudla said in a release.

Charles Evans, president and CEO of the Federal Reserve Bank of Chicago, and Dennis Lockhart, president and CEO of the Federal Reserve Bank of Atlanta, will participate in the Federal Reserve Presidents’ Panel.

“As future leaders of the industry, these students will have an unparalleled opportunity to hear first-hand, unscripted discussion from two people who make decisions that affect the economy and financial markets around the world,” Kudla added.

RISE is also the longest-running student-run investment forum in the country. It brings together investment professionals with students and faculty in an interactive, informative setting.

Since it began in 2001, RISE has attracted nearly 15,000 participants from the financial industry, and colleges and universities from around the globe.